

CONTENTS

List of figures	vii
List of contributors	x
Acknowledgements	xiii
1 Introduction: The ethics of collecting trauma: or, why a book on the ethics of collecting trauma is needed	1
Alexandra Bounia and Andrea Witcomb
PART I
Nature-culture traumas	21
2 The crisis that binds us: The ethics of collecting trauma in 'catastrophic times'	23
Jennifer Carter
3 A future for memory: Resurgence of culture-nature in the aftermath of 3.11	40
Fuyubi Nakamura
4 Mapping memorialisation of pandemic experiences: Care, stewardship and guardianship	61
Laia Colomer and Edwin Schmitt
5 Toward a higher standard: Museums, communities of trauma and the public trust	80
James B. Gardner

PART II
Decolonising trauma		95
6 Poetics, politics and ethics of collecting: Two Brazilian cases Mario de Souza Chagas and Claudia Porto		97
7 Engaging with colonial collecting practices today: Practising 'epistemic disobedience' Andrea Witcomb		117
PART III
The traumas of war, terrorism and forceful displacement		139
8 Ethically contested exhumations in eastern Zimbabwe: A compromise between spiritual approaches and scientific practices Njabulo Chipangura		141
9 Silence and remembering: Locating the cultural trauma of terrorism in London's museums, archives and memorials Rhiannon Mason		157
10 Ethics of care in collecting spontaneous memorials Kostas Arvanitis		179
11 Collecting (forced) migration: The ethics of collecting 'neglected things' Alexandra Bounia		198
12 Afterword Sally Yerkovich		218
Index		222